In the same raid a third member of the gang, ex-City Constable Edward J. Fitzpatrick, of Long Island City, was shot by Policeman Larking while trying to escape from the building, and died in the hospital several days later.

Since her husband was sent to prison, Mrs. Kinsella, it is said, has been driven by poverty, and a belief that she has not been treated fairly, to give the names of the other members of the gang of thieves, Madden had already been suspected, and even arrested about two months ago, but there was not enough evidence against him. Folmer had not been known to the police. He is married to Mrs. Kinsella's sister and his quarrel with his wife, led to the present developments.

It is said at the time of the burglaries, Mrs. Kinsella's lived in Franklin street, Greepoint, and she says her home was headquarters for the gang.

Among the robberies planned in her house was that on Patrick Laehn, who lived in Ravenswood with his aged wife. The couple had saved $500, and one night during the absence of Laehn the gang entered the place, and at the point of a pistol made the old woman give up the money. They then went to Carl Dreier's house in Vernon avenue and secured about $400 in money and jewelry.

They returned to Mrs. Kinsella's house

They returned to Mrs. Kinsella's house and told the story of the latter robbery with great gusto. Mrs. Kinsella listened to it with evident enjoyment, and has since related the circumstances to the police so definitely that the formal charges are based on the Drier robbers.

to the police so definitely that the formal charges are based on the Drier robbery.

Probably the most important robbery of which Mrs. Kinsella has told was that of the Christopher Meyer mansion, in Maspeth, where $5.900 worth of diamonds belonging to the sisters of Christopher and Cord Meyer, were secured. The mysterious Maggie O'Neil, it is believed, figures in this case, but the police are not willing to talk about her. If she and Mrs. Folmer substantiate Mrs. Kinsella's story, the officials think there will be no trouble in convicting the accused men.

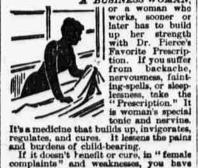

The story is told that the women determined to inform the police after a visit Folmer and Madden made at their rooms one night recently. As he came in, it is said, Folmer told his wife that he had come to "do her up." She made a plunge downstairs and escaped, but Mrs. Kinsella says Folmer then struck her on the head, and just then Madden entered the room.

The men left, she alleges, before she had recovered sufficiently to summon help. She thinks they were drunk. Afterwards she told her story to Police-Sergt, Roulette, and the men were arrested last night, Folmer in New York.

He stated, however, that in samples taken from a number of city houses the analyses showed that the water contained sewage in alarming quantities. Other samples, however, showed that the water was pure.

"The report of Commissioner Emory," said Commissioner White, to an "Evening World" reporter this morning, "is not made public, because coming from such an official source, I am afraid it might cause unwarranted alarm among some residents.

"The Department is taking every precaution now to remedy the evil, and soon we shall have the ponds and streams of the water shed so thoroughly cleaned that I hope the next analyses will show no traces of contamination."
